

Three-Screen Assembly Grades K—5

Give people a chance. See them EYE TO EYE. Because what you see is mostly the result of what you decide to look at.

It starts with a casual glance; a snap judgment from a distance. "Valuable or worthless?" "Attractive or repulsive?" "Suitable to copy or just to ridicule?" We base life-changing conclusions about people on their outside appearance and rarely take the time to see them EYE TO EYE. This type of thinking leads people to...

...be critical, lack kindness, and eventually bully others.

...believe that their self-worth is based on what others think.

...believe that some people are more valuable than others.

Every day of lives we make decisions based on what we see or at least on what we think we see. And most of the time it's a good thing we do. But sometimes, what may look real at first turns out to be not-so-real. Rather than taking a quick glance and making a snap judgment that's over in a blink, we need to take a second look with a kindness and caring attitude to see them EYE TO EYE.

What we see in other people is mostly the result of what we decide to look at. If we only look at the surface, well, we'll live on the surface. But if we take the time to look a little deeper, to listen to what people are really saying, to understand their point of view, and get to know them, we will start seeing others EYE TO EYE.
